

Enrique's prior experience includes heading the development departments of Public Allies, Pro Mujer International and the Hispanic Federation. More recently, he has worked as an independent consultant, helping a wide range of civil rights, community development, and advocacy organizations to build relationships with individual and institutional supporters. Enrique holds a Bachelor's degree in International Development and Social Change from Clark University. He lives in Brooklyn,

New York, with his wife and dog Josie.